Building Your Bottom Line

Is your facility interfering with the productivity of your business? Does your business environment enhance or detract from your company's professional image? You may never have considered these questions. However, by exploring what your facility is doing to your bottom line, you may find ways to improve your cash flow, operational efficiency and profitability.

Look around and see where physical improvements could be made to save money or increase output. A building professional, like J&F Construction & Development, can help you get a handle on the financial impact of changing, expanding, updating, consolidating or even relocating your facility.

Consider the efficiency of your energy system. Even simple things such as switching from incandescent to fluorescent lighting can save significantly on one of the costliest aspects of building upkeep.

Are you getting the most for your money when it comes to such overlooked business expenses as storage, waste disposal, water consumption and plumbing? Creative storage solutions, recycling, automatic faucets and one-gallon flush toilets offer proven money-saving benefits.

Cramped work areas can waste hundreds of man-hours each year. Redefining space divisions, adding or converting existing areas and finding new uses for empty or under-utilized rooms can pay enormous benefits in terms of morale and productivity.

Exterior improvements, such as reworking your building's façade, will enhance the appearance of your business.

Similarly, interior design upgrades will impact how your customers perceive you. Even something as simple as applying a fresh coat of paint or replacing worn carpeting positively impacts your business image.

With today's economic pressures, no company can afford to make changes just for the sake of change. At J&F Construction, we help our clients explore how to improve the performance of their buildings in ways that will enhance their bottom line. Give us a call today for a complimentary facility assessment.
